Thomas Henry Webb House
c. 1853
Vienna
Private

The Thomas Henry Webb house, also known as the Elizabeth Webb Home Place, is located on Water Street and it stands in a line of prominent early to mid nineteenth century frame dwellings that define the town's waterfront landscape. Built during the third quarter of the nineteenth century, the two-story, side hall/double pile main block was designed with distinct Greek Revival features such as the pediment enclosed gable ends and neoclassically inspired interior woodwork. Similar to other houses on Water Street, a pair of common bond brick stacks with corbelled shoulders rise on the gable end to provide a means of heat for the principal first and second floor rooms.

Late nineteenth century land records reference this Water Street property as the "Elizabeth Webb Home Place," or the "Teasdale property," during the late nineteenth century. Webb family ownership is traceable in the land records back to an 1853 transfer from trustee Benjamin D. Jackson to Thomas Henry Webb. Included in the transfer was part of the real estate of Hannah Douglas, who had held title to the Water Street property since 1815. Due to the mid nineteenth century Greek Revival architectural finishes of this two-story, side hall/double-pile dwelling, it was likely built just after the 1853 transfer. Thomas H. Webb operated a hotel in the dwelling next door, which was known as the Tavern House (See D-156). Both structures stood directly across Water Street from the Nanticoke River bridge that spanned the Nanticoke between 1828 and 1860. Ship captain and hotel owner Thomas H. Webb sold his Water Street property, including both houses, to his son Albert Webb in January 1869, however, T. H. Webb is designated on this site on the Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson atlas map of Vienna published in 1877. Albert and his wife Mary retained ownership of the Greek Revival dwelling until a sale to Elizabeth Teasdale in 1881. The Teasdales held title to the property until a default in the mortgage, forcing sale of the two-story house and Water Street lot. The house and lot were purchased by John W. T. Webb, the surviving partner in the mercantile company of Webb & Bro., in 1902. Webb family tenure in the house was maintained for the net sixty-six years, finally transferring the property to John W. and Margaret M. Leonard in 1968.

DESCRIPTION SUMMARY

The Thomas Henry Webb house, also known as the Elizabeth Webb Home Place, also known more recently as the Leonard House, stands at 109 Water Street in the town of Vienna, Dorchester County, Maryland. Built around 1850-60, the two-story, three-bay side hall/double pile frame house faces southeast with the gable roof oriented on northeast/southwest axis. Supported on a low concrete block pier foundation, the exterior is clad with vinyl siding over plain weatherboards, and the medium pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the front of the house is a hip roofed Colonial Revival porch supported on Tuscan columns. The northeast and southwest gable ends are finished with a gable end pediment. Rising on the southwest gable end is a pair of common bond brick chimney stacks finished with corbelled shoulders. Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story service wing. The interior is finished with Greek Revival inspired woodwork. A mid nineteenth century turned newel post and landing posts, support a ramped mahogany handrail, and the stair stringer is embellished with a scroll decoration.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The Thomas Henry Webb house, known during the fourth quarter of the 20th century as the Leonard house, stands at 109 Water Street facing the Nanticoke River in the town of Vienna, Dorchester County, Maryland. The two-story, three-bay side hall/double pile main block, dating to the third quarter of the nineteenth century, is supported on a part brick, part concrete block pier foundation, and the exterior is sheathed with vinyl siding over weatherboards. The medium pitched gable roof, finished with enclosed pediments on the northeast and southwest sides, is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story service wing.

The southeast (main) façade is a three-bay elevation with a side entrance and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The partially glazed front door is framed by an eight-pane transom and four-light sidelights. The adjacent six-over-six sash windows retain shutter hinge hardware, however, the shutters are no longer extant on the house. Sheltering the first floor is an early twentieth century Tuscan columned front porch covered with a low pitched hip roof. The second floor is lighted by three unevenly spaced six-over-six sash windows. The base of the gable roof is trimmed with a boxed cornice covered with vinyl sheathing.

The southwest gable end is dominated by a pair of exterior common bond brick chimney stacks finished with corbelled shoulders at the second floor level. Each story is pierced by three six-over-six sash windows, and a single window opening pierces the gable end. The northeast gable end is an asymmetrical façade with a single six-over-six sash window on the first floor and two identical sash light the second floor. The rear (northwest) wall is largely covered by a two-story, two-bay service wing.

The interior of the main block retains third quarter of the nineteenth century Greek Revival woodwork. The main stair rises against the northeast wall of the side passage. A turned newel post and turned landing posts support a ramped mahogany handrail, and the stringer is decorated with an applied scroll decoration. Greek Revival corner block surrounds frame the door openings. The mantel in the southwest room follows the standard Greek Revival form with plain pilasters that rise to a plain frieze and support a thick mantel shelf.
